A NUMBER of the inhabitants of Aberdeen animated by a desire to give effect to the provisions of Mr. Bryce's "Access to Mountains Bill," on the 21rd September made a raid on the hill Benochie, situated in the centre the county, and in the midst of one of the most fertile regions in the north of Scotland. About 500 persons, chiefly artisans from Aberdeen, ascended the hill, where speeches were delivered denunciatory of the conduct of the landlords in appropriating the mountain, which they contended belonged to the people. A resolution was passed demanding the restoration of " the public right of access " to the mountain, and a committee was appointed to give effect to it.

SUPREME COURT

IN BANKRUPTCY.

(Before Mr. 7. Fielding Clark, Acting Chief Justica.)

Re SORABJEE RUSTOMIEE.

In this matter Mr. Wilkinson appeared for the petitioning creditor, Mr. Reece for the debtor, and Mr. Bowles and Mr. Master for creditors. Mr. Wilkinson said that he had to apply for the debtor's adjudication as bankrupt, and to a-k for his protection, as he was entitled to it, having surrendered. Mr. Master, who represented debts to the extent of $47,000, opposed it, on the ground that it-was entirely a matter for the Court's discretion: The usual practice was for the Registrar to grant protection when the adjudication was on the debtor's petition, but not if it was on a creditor's petition. Although Rustomjee was present, now, he had previously removed himself to Macao, and only stopped here just as long as it suited him. If he found matters were getting too warm for him again he would go away again. Therefore he ought not to have protection, except when he first came to surrender himself upon the first meeting of creditors. The petitioning creditor was Mr Daver, who presented a petition on the 4th September last, but nothing was done on it. A second petition was entered on the 11th September. He believed that between those dates Mr. McCulloch, for whom Mr. Bowles appeared, brought an action against the debtor, and obtained judgment. Then Mr. Daver came forward and pressed his petition. pressing for the debtor's adjudication, to which the latter silently consented. There were very strong grounds for believing that there was collusion between the petitioner and the debtorhe suspected that it was not a bond fide petition. PORTUGUESE PASTIMES.

On the night of Saturday the 20th inst, five or six young, men, alleged to be Portuguese, having a dollar to spend, went out in all their bravery to spend it. The Ko-shing theatre amused them until about midnight, and from then until daylight, they coquetted inexpensively with a promiscuously-inclined bevy of Chinese girls. About five o'clock they set off to attend mass at St. Francis Church, Wanchai, but as one of them tried to assault the Chineso priest who was officiating, Father Vigano came up in his pyjamas, and the copper-colored crowd were hustled into outer darkness. They came back to the central part of the city again, and at 6.30 entered the Hongkong Hotel to finish up the terrific "time" they had been having. One of the party was an unemployed nobleman from Macao, named Arthuro Barros. He, with the rest, had a drink, and then went to a table and began to read the "Fragrant Waters Murmur" column in our esteemed evening contemporary. Shattered as were his nerves by the preceding dissipation, the strain of reading English-and especially such English-"bust" him up, and he began to throw the papers and chairs about wildly. Then he must have fallen into a child-like slumber for a while, for he only recommenced pe forming about half-past eight, when he hung on to the bar and gasped for "another drink." The boys," with that lordly indifference characteristic of them-went on wiping glasses, and ignored him. Then he invited their best man to come out and fight. The fat old watchman yanked him out as he was climbling over the barbut he returned by another door, and began to scatter the tumblers over the tesselated pavement. One of the "boys," named Wong Hin, pushed him away, and started picking up the fragments, when the bold Barros "fetched him one" with a fresh glass, just where his pig-tail ceases to continue. The police came-Barros was arrested, and Wong taken to the Hospital. Mr. Wodehouse finished the case this morning.

The Court was filled with spectators of varied bue and in wonderful attire. Wong made his statement as to how he was injured, and Dr. Atkinson described the nature of the wound. It was on the top of the head; about two inches long, and exposing the bone. It might have been very dangerous. There was also a bruise on the eye. Mr. Bowles, who prosecuted, pressed for a severe penalty, as a warning to the prisoner and the Portuguese generally.

Mr. Caldwell, in defence, pleaded that Barros

PROFESSOR MILNE'S RAILWAY VIBRATION RECORDER.

During the meeting of the British Association at Newcastle, Professor Milne, of the Imperial University of Tokio, whose name is already well known to our readers, read a paper which attracted so much attention that it was by special request read in three different sections. It excited lively discussions and applause in each, and was especially fortunate in securing the warm General Brokers and Commission Agents. support and approval of Sir William Thomson. one of the Nestors of science. In the paper in Equestion Professor Milne describes an instrument which was invented and perfected by himself and Mr. Macdonald, of the Japan Railway Department, for recording graphically all the movements, of whatever character, of a train while in motion. The invention appears to have arisen naturally out of various experiments conducted by Professor Milne for the discovery of an instrument which will accurately record all the movements of an earthquake. It works on the same principle as a sisemograph, although it could not be used to second earthquakes, any more than the sisemograph could be used to record the vibrations of a train. Its main feature is that there are points which record relatively the vertical and horizontal movements of the train. No part swings on its own account like a pendulum, but the pointers or recorders pulsate with the motion of the train. These pointers, of which there are three, record the vertical, the horizontal, and what may be called the fore and aft or jerky motions, and mark on slips of paper every motion and incident in the journey of the train from one terminus to another; and although there are three of these recorders, the whole instrument is not much larger than a good-sized microscope. The diagram which is produced shows not only the speed of the train at every point of the journey, where it stopped, and how long it stopped at each place, but it also shows where the line has been badly ballasted, where the rivets have become imperfect from wear or any other reason, where the sleepers are bad, whether the carriages run smoothly, whether the the engine is well balanced and pulls with the greatest economy of fuel, where and when brakes have been put on and taken off, where and when efforts have been made by increasing speed to make up for lost time, and, as a member of the British Association said, "the wonder is that it doesn't" show when the guard and the engine-driver li their pipes and took a glass of beer." A train is reported as being so many minutes late. The traffic manager in his office, it may be hundreds of miles away, can put his finger on the spot where time was lost, and if an effort has been made to increase speed at any part of the line to make up for it, he can put his finger on the place at which this was done. For goods, trains travelling long distances, and often wasting time 'upon 'sidings, these recorders would be of especial value as a check. An' examination of a record after a journey not only shows all the abnormal irregularities of the line, as, for instance, at the points and crossings, want of ballast, faults in sleepers, irregular yieldings in bridges, but he can indicate the exact spot of each irregularity, and instruct his workmen accordingly. Every record, too, is rytomatic, and is written on a continuously sunning band of paper. A board of contractors in London desiring to know the condition of a line in South America. can read it off as in a map upon one of these recorders which has been in adtrain running over it. In the case of collisions it will no longer be of any use for the engine-driver to say that he put on his brake at such and such a signal if he did not do so. An instance of the delicacy of the instrument, was shown in the case of the well-known Kawasaki Bridge on the Tokio and Yokohama Railway. The recorder pointed to a curious movement in one of the girders of this bridge; it was quite abnormal, and was recorded on every journey. From the diagram it appeared to be a gentle, spring-like bending. Experiment after experiment made to feel the movement without the record failed;

but the latter never falled to Indicate it. At last

each of the girders was seriously tested, and it was found that the deflection in one girder was double that of any other, The instrument has placed at his disposal by several of the most important railways in this country. As a result, we understand two of the largest and wealthiest companies running out of London have decided to adopt some of the instruments as an experiment. The ingenious inventors seem to have good reason to congratulate themselves on the reception of Professor Milne's paper at the British Association, and on the attention which has been excited in the railway world by their vibration recorder .-- L. & C. o'clock. The long-expected "boom" in Punjoms has come at last. Early this forenoon the busy-bees were quietly at work, and a considerable number of shares were picked up at 12 and 121. The report soon spread round that a favorable telegram had been received from London, and with one bound the quotation jumped to 20, and when our report left 'the Rialto' offers of 22 failed to lead to business. We have no official information, but nevertheless have good reason for believing that-the true OLD PATNA, touch (second choice) per state of the case is as follows :-- An offer has been made by a London Syndicate to OLD PATNA, (bottom) per chest $545 take over 20 miles of the Punjom NEW BENARES, (bottom) per chest. $5454 Company's property for the sum of £190,000. Of this amount it is proposed that the Punjom Company should take £100,000 in stock of the proposed new enterprise, £40,000 to be utilised as the working capital, and £5000 in cash. The balance of £45,000, we assume, is to be appropriated as promotion money by the London speculators who have arranged the business. With the exception last mentioned "squeeze"and that it is a wholesale "squeeze" everybody must admit-the offer looks a favorable one, and must, of course, hama on the 24th, at daylight, and may be greatly enhance the market value of expected here on or about the 29th.
